

SURVEY: 9 OUT OF 10 AMERICANS SUPPORT 40 MPG VEHICLE GOAL TO CUT U.S. MIDDLE EASTERN OIL DEPENDENCY, GREENHOUSE GAS EMISSIONS

NASCAR Fans, Conservatives and Others Agree: 40 MPG Fuel-Efficiency Standard Should Be U.S. Standard; New 40mpg.org Web Site Gives Americans Way to Talk Back to Automakers, Congress

DETROIT, MI.///March 17, 2005///Faced with an unsettled Middle East region and rising gasoline prices, millions of Americans are starting to look at their own car, truck, SUV and other vehicle purchases as a way that they can exert a personal influence on U.S. energy and national security policies, according to an Opinion Research Corporation national opinion poll released today in conjunction with the launch of the Web site, which gives car owners a powerful new forum in which to tell automakers and Congress that they support a federal fuel efficiency standard of 40 miles per gallon (mpg) ...

Read the March 1, 2005 news release.

Listen to the streaming audio of a related news event.

Read the March 17, 2005 report on full survey findings.

Check out the 40mpg.org Web site.